

THANKSGIVING DINNER

Choice of one from each Course

🕯️ FIRST COURSE 🕯️

Peanut Soup

Chopped Peanuts and Sippets

King's Arms Seasonal Greens

garnished with marinated Tomatoes, Cucumbers, Carrots
Raspberry Vinaigrette

🕯️ SECOND COURSE 🕯️

Mrs. Vobe's Roasted Young Turkey

Savory herb Dressing and Giblet Pan Gravy
Bourbon-Honey roasted Yams, Cranberry-Orange Relish

Pan-cooked Red Snapper

Served with finest Crabmeat, butter-dill Sauce, roasted Garlic Potatoes

Slow-roasted Prime Rib of Beef

The favourite English Joint, seasoned with colonial Spices
Sauce of Red Wine reduction, Horseradish, and roasted Garlic Potatoes

🕯️ MRS. VOBÉ'S SWEETS 🕯️

Pumpkin Pie

with Nutmeg Cream

Chocolate Cake

with Raspberry Sauce

Mrs. Vobe's Pecan Pie

with Caramel Drizzle

Williamsburg Ice Creams

Vanilla, Chocolate or Cinnamon

All dinners served with seasonal Vegetables and tavern Breads

Featuring R. Charlton's Blend of American Heritage Coffee

NO THANKSGIVING IN WILLIAMSBURG

S*CHOLARS* will search in vain for any mention of Thanksgiving Day in the 18th-century Virginia Gazette. Fourth Thursdays in November were no different from other days—runaway slaves, lost pocketbooks, ships departing to London. Page after page, it is always business as usual. No festivities, no turkey, no stuffing, no sleigh ride to grandmother’s house, in short, no Thanksgiving Day.

There were, however, many days of thanksgiving. Bumper harvests, drought-breaking rains, safe voyages, and military victories were made frequent occasions for public prayers and celebrations during the 17th and 18th centuries. The colonists who settled Berkeley Hundred in 1619 carried instructions to give thanks “yearly and perpetually” on the anniversary of their arrival. And they did for three years—until Indians annihilated the settlement in 1622, after which it seemed prudent for surviving Virginians to proclaim another day of thanksgiving for having been spared. There were comparable observances in 18th-century Williamsburg. Days of thanksgiving were proclaimed, for instance, to commemorate Queen Anne’s health and the “happy agreement” between her Majesty and the Houses of Parliament.

These were all solemn religious occasions. They have only an indirect relationship to the present Thanksgiving holiday, which we should give ungrudgingly to New Englanders. Or, better yet, to Old Englanders, for the Plymouth Colony Pilgrims were only celebrating a folk custom that they remembered from England. The Harvest Home, a time of feasting, dancing, and gaming after the crops were safely gathered, was an ancient peasant festival. Brought to all of the American colonies, it thrived best in the small farming communities of New England. Only in 1863 did President Abraham Lincoln make Thanksgiving Day a national holiday as a reminder of “peace, harmony, tranquillity, and Union” in a time of civil war. So it turns out that your Thanksgiving dinner in Williamsburg is one of history’s tastier ironies.

Colonial Williamsburg® and King’s Arms Tavern® are registered trademarks of The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Your patronage of Colonial Williamsburg hotels and restaurants supports the educational mission of The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the not-for-profit organization that operates the Revolutionary City. Thanks to the contributions of friends across the nation, Colonial Williamsburg is able to inspire millions with the lessons of our nation’s founding and their relevance to our liberty and democracy today. To learn more about supporting Colonial Williamsburg, please call 1-888-CWF-1776 or visit us on the web at colonialwilliamsburg.com.